

PHILOSOPHY IN RUSSIA

From Herzen to Lenin and Berdyaev

BY

FREDERICK C. COPLESTON, S.J.

Professor Emeritus of the University of London

SEARCH PRESS

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

CONTENTS

	Page
Author's Preface	vii
Chapter 1. INTRODUCTION	1
1. Western influence, social commitment and the problem of Russia. 2. Kievan Russia to Peter the Great. 3. The Theological Academies. 4. Catherine the Great and the Enlightenment. 5. Freemasonry in Russia. 6. The influence of German idealism.
Chapter 2. CHAADAEV: RUSSIA AND THE WEST	26
1. Biographical sketch. 2. The two aspects of Chaadaev's view of Russia and her relation to western Europe. 3. Chaadaev in relation to Westerners and Slavophiles. 4. Chaadaev's philosophical anthropology and view of history. 5. Critical discussion of Chaadaev's philosophical ideas.
Chapter 3. IVAN KIREEVSKY AND INTEGRAL KNOWLEDGE	45
1. Slavophilism. 2. The development of Kireevsky's ideas. 3. Criticism of rationalism. 4. The idea of integral knowledge. 5. Khomyakov and 'faith'. 6. K. Aksakov and Samarin on state and society. 7. The concept of sobornost .
Chapter 4. FROM RECONCILIATION WITH REALITY TO REVOLUTION	77
1. The Decembrist revolt. 2. Belinsky's and Bakunin's reconciliation with reality. 3. Herzen and Hegelianism as the algebra of revolution. 4. Belinsky as a Westernizer. 5. Bakunin as anarchist. 6. Herzen on Russian socialism. 7. Freedom and morality in Herzen's thought.
Chapter 5. THE NEW MEN	100
1. The philosophical ideas of the 1860s. 2. Nihilism. 3. Chernyshevsky: radical hero of the sixties. 4. Chernyshevsky's aesthetic theory. 5. Ethical utilitarianism. 6. Chernyshevsky's social ideal. 7. The thought of Pisarev. 8. Final remarks on Nihilism.
Chapter 6. PETER LAVROV AND THE SUBJECTIVE METHOD	119
1. Populism in Russia. 2. A sketch of Lavrov's life. 3. Positivist elements in Lavrov's thought. 4. The active subject and freedom. 5. The historian and the subjective method. 6. Critical inquiry and action. 7. Summary.
Chapter 7. DOSTOEVSKY AND PHILOSOPHY	142
1. Introductory. 2. Dostoevsky as 'dialectician'. 3. As a 'metaphysician'. 4. The Pochvenniki group. 5. The utility of art. 6. Social theory. 7. The role of value-judgments in Dostoevsky's thought.
Chapter 8. MEANING IN LIFE AND HISTORY	168
1. Introductory remarks. 2. Tolstoy: crisis and conversion. 3. Moral idealism. 4. Art and morality. 5. The primacy of the ethical on history. 6. Leontyev: the aesthetic and religious attitudes. 7. Leontyev on the philosophy of history. 8. Rozanov: an enigmatic writer. 9. Rozanov's critique of Christianity.

Chapter 9. RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY: VLADIMIR SOLOVYEV	201
1.The Russian intelligentsia and religion. 2.Biographical material. 3.The nature and functions of philosophy. 4.Sources of knowledge. 5.God and the world. 6.The Great Being. 7.Moral philosophy. 8.Social ethics. 9.Morality and freedom. 10.General remarks.
Chapter 10. MARXISM IN IMPERIAL RUSSIA (1): PLEKHANOV	241
1.Populism, capitalism and the rise of Marxism. 2.Plekhanov, Lenin and Russian Social Democracy. 3.Dialectical materialism and philosophy. 4.Plekhanov's theory of hieroglyphics and his use of Kantian ethics. 5.Law, necessity and freedom. 6.Theory of art. 7.What is Marxist orthodoxy?
Chapter 11. MARXISM IN IMPERIAL RUSSIA (2): LENIN	284
1.The 'revisionism' of A. Bogdanov. 2.The life of Lenin up to 1917. 3.Lenin and empiriomonism. 4.The dialectic and the Revolution. 5.Lenin as a partisan in philosophy.
Chapter 12. MARXISM IN THE SOVIET UNION	313
1.The arts and philosophy after the Revolution. 2.Mechanism and Menshevizing idealism: Bukharin and Deborin. 3.Philosophy under Stalin. 4.After 1953: Logic. 5.Philosophy and science. 6.Psychology. 7.Ethics. 8.Marxism and other philosophies.
Chapter 13. PHILOSOPHERS IN EXILE (1)	352
1.Preliminary remarks. 2.Semyon Frank and total-unity. 3.N. O. Lossky; epistemology and metaphysics. 4.The personalist element in Lossky's thought.
Chapter 14. PHILOSOPHERS IN EXILE (2)	371
1.N. Berdyaev: ontology and freedom. 2.Berdyaev on the person, freedom and society. 3.The meaning of history as conceived by Berdyaev 4.L. Shestov: rationalism, history and religion.
Epilogue	400
Bibliography	411
Index	431