

A History of Classical Chinese Thought

Li Zehou

Translated, with a philosophical introduction, by Andrew Lambert

Contents

	Foreword: Translator's Introduction	x
	Li Zehou and the Articulation of a Chinese Modernity xi
	Li Zehou's Characterization of the Chinese Intellectual Tradition xvii
	Assessing Li Zehou's Scholarship xxii
	A Note About Translation xxv
1	Reevaluating Confucius	1
	The Characteristics of 'Ritual' 1
	The Formation of Confucian Humaneness (Ren) 7
	i. A Foundation in Bloodline and Kinship 8
	ii. Ritual Propriety Initiated Externally 9
	iii. Humanism 13
	iv. Personal Character 16
	v. Practical Rationality 19
	Strengths and Weaknesses 23
	On Mencius 29
2	A Preliminary Exploration of the Mohists	51
	Ideas Representative of Small-Scale Producers and Workers 51
	Mohist Thought Has Not Disappeared 63
3	Sunzi, Laozi, and Han Fei	77
	The Features of the Military Strategists' Dialectic 77
	The Three Levels of the Laozi 83
	Sagely Wisdom That Enriches the People 95

4	Key Features of the Xunzi, Yizhuan and the Doctrine of the Mean	108
	The Characteristics of the Human Race 108
	The Establishment of a Confucian Worldview 124
	Tian, Ren, and Dao 133
5	Qin and Han Dynasty Thought	142
	The Synthesis of Daoism, Legalism, Yin-Yang Cosmology, and Confucianism 142
	Dong Zhongshu's Cosmological Account of Tian and Humanity 152
	Yin-Yang and the Five Phases 163
	The Historical Impact of Five-Phase Schema 172
6	Zhuangzi and Chan Buddhism	183
	Zhuangzi's Philosophy as Aesthetics 184
	A Metaphysics of Personal Character 196
	Momentariness and Eternity as the Highest Realms 204
	Conclusion 220
7	Some Thoughts on Neo-Confucianism	228
	From Cosmology to Ethics 228
	The Establishment of a Rational Ontology and Its Contradictions 239
	Mind (Xin) as Transcendence and Sensibility 248
	A Twofold Legacy 258
	Additional Thoughts 263
8	Engagement in Practical Affairs and Statecraft	276
	'Sageliness Within' and 'Kinglyness Without' 276
	Government by Character Versus Government by Law 286
	The Study of the Classics and the Study of History 295
9	Some Thoughts on Chinese Wisdom	308
	The Question of Historical Eras 308
	The Foundation of Kinship Ties 311
	Pragmatic Reasoning 315
	A Culture Characterized by Sensitivity to Delight 317
	'Tianren Heyi': The Unity of the Cosmos and Humanity 325

Afterword	335
Bibliography	339
Index	348