

Contents

Introduction	6	The coming of the friars
Michael Angold		The universities in the thirteenth century
The frontiers of Christendom	9	The age of synthesis
Western attitudes to Byzantium and Islam		Rationalism and the natural sciences
The economic background to western expansion		The collapse of universalism
The Fourth Crusade and its aftermath		Late medieval heresy
The Fall of the Latin Empire		The withdrawal from authority
The Greek resurgence		Barrie Dobson
Charles of Anjou and Michael Palaeologos		England and France at peace and war	67
Decline of the crusades and loss of the crusader states		The ascendancy of France
The Mongols and the West		English kingship under attack: John and Henry III
Mamelukes and Ottomans		English monarchy vindicated: Edward I (1272-1307)
The crusades in the later middle ages		Capetian kingship
The union of the Churches		Capetian government
Venice and the Turks		The accession of the Valois
The end of Italian commercial supremacy		The origins of the war
Expansion in northern Europe		The openings of the war (1337-1345)
The Teutonic knights		Crécy and Calais
The Luxemburgs in central Europe		The collapse of France (1347-1360)
German migration eastwards		The art of war
The Hanseatic League		War and chivalry
Slavs and Germans		The effects of the war
Slav reaction		Charles V and the recovery of France
The great discoveries and renewed expansion overseas		Michael Angold
Michael Angold		Town and countryside	95
The papacy	22	The years of expansion
Innocent III in the light of papal tradition		The foundations of prosperity
The political background of Innocent III's reign		Natural resources
Innocent III: reform of the Church		The commercial revolution
Innocent III: the growth of papal government		Symptoms of economic decline
Relations with secular rulers		The roots of a crisis
Innocent III's legacy		The nature of the later medieval crisis
The thirteenth-century papacy: theory and practice		The Black Death
The struggle with Emperor Frederick II (1212-1250)		The repercussions of war
Criticism of the papacy		Depression in the countryside
The new forces		The end of the urban boom
Boniface VIII and Philip the Fair		Change in the later middle ages
Philip's victory		Reorganisation
The popes at Avignon		Reconstruction in the countryside
The return to Italy and the last struggle with the empire		The contribution of the towns
The outbreak of the Great Schism		The dawn of modern economy
The conciliar movement
The Council of Constance		Chronological Charts	125
Victory for papal monarchy		Further Reading List	126
Barrie Dobson		Acknowledgments	126
Clerks, scholars and heretics	41	Index	127
The new learning and the new law
Faith and reason in the twelfth century
The problem of heresy			