

EUROPEAN POLITICAL THOUGHT 1600–1700

W. M. Spellman

*Associate Professor of History
University of North Carolina, Asheville*

CONTENTS

Time-Line	ix
Preface	xi
Introduction	1
1 Civil Authority in an Unfamiliar Setting	8
Preliminary Assumptions	10
Monarchs	13
Types of Counsellors	16
The Ruled	20
Principal Objectives	24
Shared Perspectives	29
The Best Form	32
2 Contours of Absolute Monarchy	34
Why Absolutism?	35
Appearance and Reality	38
General Assumptions and Specific
Impediments	44
Duty, Moderation, Natural Law	50
Jean Bodin and James VI and I	53
Bossuet, Filmer and Scripture	59
Celestial Mandates	65
3 Constitutions and Consent	67
Appeals to Tradition	70
Ancient Constitutions	86
The Beginnings of Popular Sovereignty	89
Locke's Christian Contractualism	92
Transitions	101

4	Republicanism Rekindled	103
	Unintended Republic	106
	England's Experiment	110
	Initial Expedients	113
	Milton's Contribution	115
	Seventeenth-century Democracy	118
	Religion and 'True Levellers'	124
	Harrington's Determinism	126
	Some Sequels	131
5	The Emergence of the Modern State	135
	Natural Law without Divinity	137
	States without Confessions	145
	Individual Rights	152
	The State as Human Artifact	158
	A Late Dissent	166
	Conclusion: Exit Divinity	171
	Notes and References	182
	Index	202