During the session of the FISP Steering Committee in Helsinki, 2005, it was decided that the FISP Committee on International Cooperation and Philosophical Encounters should collect information about the current worldwide situation in philosophy in different regions. The focus is on philosophy as it stands today, at the beginning of the 21st century. It would be extremely interesting to detect the shifts occurring in philosophy's self-reflection of its most relevant problems and issues. It would be of equal importance to know which philosophical traditions and currents are being regarded as relevant and productive for solving the problems which are imposed on thought by current developments of humankind all over the planet. FISP Committee gives a brief panorama of philosophical thought in rather different regions.

Head of the FISP project «Philosophy Worldwide: Current Situation» professor Maija Küle, scientific assistant Līva Muižniece
